

Clam shack

Once part of an early 1900s fishing camp at this location on Orcas Island, Wash., the original 1,000-square-foot clam shack burned down. In order to rebuild, the owners were required to keep the new structure the same size. The architects used stone, a muted palette, and simple detailing to restore the cozy getaway. With a master bedroom and bunkroom, it can comfortably sleep several guests. ■

Design: Sullivan Conard Architects, www.sullivanconard.com